CAVALRY FIGHTING. RUSSIANS PUSHED BACK.

LIVEVITCH OUTMANOEUVRED.

HEAVY LOSSES.

CHINA FEARS FOR MONGOLIA.

LONDON, June 19.

The Japanese claim several cavalry successes against General Linévitch. The fiercest fighting took place in the Kang-ping district, 30 miles north-west of Chang-chi. The 10th division, after 10 miles north-east of Kang-ping, the Japanese made such a vigorous pursuit that they captured the Russian position at Linévitch, 20 miles north-west of Harbin. It is known that east of Kirin the Japanese are at a point only 140 miles south-east of Harbin. From this it will be seen that the Russian retreat is in some extent, though not completely, parallel to his line of communication—the railway—which always has its grave disadvantages. There will be a gradual withdrawal northward along a road west of the railway, and through the villages beyond as the Russian retreats. Secondly, along an important road that may be described as running from Kai-yuan, via T'ung, to Kirin. These will be the main routes taken by the Japanese, and any developments on the east in the turning operations against the Russian First (Kuropatkin's) Army will be dependent upon the progress made along the proper. The Japanese have been consistently successful in moving their armies so that each one falls into position as prearranged at the right time. It will be for Linévitch to break down this hitherto perfect co-operation. In the event of the Japanese breaking through the line, the Russian reserves in the rear are already reinforcing the forward lines. General Linévitch is conferring with his generals at Siping-kai, on the railway, 50 miles north-east of Chang-chi.

RUSSIANS OUTFLANKED.

Ultimately the Russians retreated northward in great confusion, being exposed to a severe shell fire. They abandoned provisions and clothing. Eighty dead were found in one spot. It is surmised that the total Russian losses were great. According to prisoners, 5000 of General Linévitch's cavalry, with 20 guns, occupied Linévitch. Thirty Japanese were killed, and 185 wounded.

GENERAL LINEVITCH ADMITS THAT HE WAS OUTFLANKED, AND COMPELLED TO EVACUATE LIN-ÉVITCH.

General Linévitch reports that the Japanese are now in the line of communication, and that the Russian reserves in the rear are already reinforcing the forward lines. General Linévitch is conferring with his generals at Siping-kai, on the railway, 50 miles north-east of Chang-chi.

OUTPOST FIGHTING.

KOREANS KILLED BY A TORPEDO.

Thirty-five Koreans who were handling a stranded torpedo were killed by the resulting explosion.

COMMENTS ON THE SITUATION.

The fact that General Linévitch has conferred with his generals at Siping-kai is considered worthy of special mention. The first engagement of the battle—following a series of minor skirmishes—was fought on the railway—ended in a Russian defeat. Some time ago it was reported that General Oku was on the extreme west, and that General Nogi had been placed between Oku and Nodzu. The latter, army prior to the battle of Mukden, occupied the central position between Oku and Kuroki. Now Oku has six divisions in the field, and there is every reason to believe that the armies of Oku and Nodzu are now in a position to attack the Japanese. The Japanese are silent regarding this army, but may spring into light north-east of Kirin, facing with Kuroki and Kawamura in the encircling movement.

THE CEAR YIELDS.

ZEMSTOVOS TO BE RECEIVED.

When General Trepoft, Assistant Minister of the Interior, ascertained that the Governor of Moscow had authorized the meeting of the Congress of Zemstvos, the delegation declared it would be the last time that they would appear in the Congress instead of five members as private citizens, an arrangement which had been previously insisted upon.

The Czar at first refused to receive the address from the Zemstvos on the ground that it was excessively abrupt, and would only receive five members of the Congress if they came to him as private individuals who are familiarly acquainted with the conditions of the country, but he forbade them to make any reference to the question of peace. The delegation declared it would be the last time that they would appear in the Congress instead of five members as private citizens, an arrangement which had been previously insisted upon.

GREAT BRITAIN'S DEMANDS.

RUSSIA CONFESSES IGNORANCE.

LONDON, June 19.

Sir Charles Hardinge, British Ambassador at St. Petersburg, has represented to Count Lamoriniere, the Russian Minister for Foreign Affairs, the gravity of the sinking of the St. Kilda by the Russian cruiser Dnieper (Petersburg), especially in view of the Petersburg's actions in the Red Sea in 1904. Sir Charles Hardinge asked for reparation, and that immediate steps be taken to render a repetition of the outrage impossible.

Count Lamoriniere said he had no information regarding the matter, and promised to refer the matter to the Minister of Marine. Count Lamoriniere reiterated that the assurances he gave in 1904 to the British Government still held good. The St. Kilda was an isolated case, which was prohibited, due to a misunderstanding and the disappearance of the ship.

The advice which reached Sydney yesterday by the Messageries Maritimes Company's steamer Pacific contained but meagre particulars of the tragedy, but complete details are now known. Mr. Trumble, a Philadelphian, was a member of the New Hebrides Group. Mr. Trumble was a French settler in the New Hebrides Group, was the scene of the outrage. It appears that a few weeks ago he had a dispute with some of the natives of the island in regard to some trading matter, the nature of which has not so far transpired. During the course of the quarrel, so it is alleged, Trumble, in self-defence, shot one of the natives, who died instantaneously. The sight of their dead comrade lying on the ground evidently infuriated the remainder of the tribe, and in revenge they joined forces in a violent onslaught on the Australian settler.

Trumble was evidently first attacked with a
